

What if generosity in your church became less about dollars and more about discipleship?

God calls us to be generous because He has first been generous toward us. Biblical generosity is an act of worship, a response to the Gospel, and an opportunity to participate in God's work. But how do we cultivate a culture of generosity in our churches without pressuring people to give?

Paul points us to the ultimate motivation for generosity in 2 Corinthians 8:9: "Though he was rich, yet for your sake he became poor, so that you by his poverty might become rich." Our generosity flows from the generosity of Christ. When believers understand what they have received through the gospel, giving is no longer an obligation. It becomes a joyful response to God's grace.

Join the Church Ambassador Network and Bare Wealth Advisors for a practical and encouraging LIVE webinar designed to help pastors, elders, and ministry leaders develop a healthy, gospel-centered culture of generosity.
